Dear Mrs. Williams,

I wish to remind you that the right to non-violent protest, as the free expression of political opinion, is enshrined in several British, European and international statutes. What statutory powers does Leicester University invoke in order to deny me the right to peaceful protest on public land?

Sincerely,

Kevin Galalae

Dear Mr Galalae

Your request to Professor Murphy has been passed to me for reply.

The University will not grant you permission to use the University's grounds for the purpose of conducting a hunger strike, or indeed, as you are no longer a student of the University, for any purpose at all.

Our security service is being provided with your name and such personal details as you volunteered to us when you registered, and if you attempt to initiate the action you describe you will be asked by them to leave the campus. If you refuse to leave voluntarily, the police will be called.

Yours sincerely

Kathy Williams

Dear Mrs. Norton,

Professor Murphy's automated service has advised me to direct my request to you while she is absent from the office.

I would like to know who I need to contact for permission to use Leicester's grounds for a hunger strike. I intend to come to Leicester in May for a ten-day hunger strike in order to expose the university's complicity in censoring the academic environment and spying on its students with Britain's secret service agencies under the auspices of CONTEST.

I would greatly appreciate your direction in this respect.

Sincerely,

Kevin Galalae
